Short Description

After you incorporate a Panama Private Interest Foundation, the next step you need to take is to open a bank account.

Description

The Panama Foundation is a very flexible figure for general estate planning, assets protection, and family inheritance purposes. It also allows the investor to perform transactions and to distribute the proceeds generated from the same, with a grade of privacy superior to any other type of investment instrument. The Foundation may be used to hold any type of assets, present or future, and may derive its income from any type of legal business. The Foundation will constitute a separate estate from those of The Founder and Beneficiaries. According to our laws, under no circumstances, the assets of the Foundation could be used to satisfy the personal obligation of The Founder or of The Beneficiaries.

The Founder can be a natural or legal person; furthermore, the standard practice is to use a nominee founder in order to grant more privacy, in this way the client individual name would not need to appear at the Foundation Charter, which is a public document. One important advantage gained by using a Panama Foundation is its tax treatment. For tax purposes, Foundations receive the same treatment as an offshore "IBC" company, and as such, it is governed and benefits from the Panamanian tax principle of territoriality. Under this system, only incomes or profits generated within the geographic territory of Panama are subject to Panama tax.

Incorporation Cost:

The total cost of the Panama Private Interest Foundations is US$2,000 and includes documents translations into English language and Apostille legalisation of all the official documents.
